Executor Roadmap & First 48 Hours Checklist

The first 48 hours after a death are chaotic.

Your executor will be dealing with their own grief while also handling urgent practical matters. They need to secure property, notify key people, and start organizing paperwork.

This checklist helps them prioritize what needs to happen immediately and what can wait.

The first 48 hours: Secure, Notify, Record

Your Executor Roadmap & First 48 Hours Checklist

A step-by-step path through the first hours and days, so nothing urgent is missed.

WITHIN THE FIRST FEW HOURS

- Secure the person's home (lock up, set alarm, collect mail, pets, plants)
- Locate the Will (check Part 2; contact the lawyer who drafted it)
- Locate this Estate Organizer and read the Message to Your Executor
- Contact immediate family (see Key Contacts)

WITHIN THE FIRST 24 HOURS

- Obtain the Death certificate
- Register the death (your funeral director usually handles this; how it works and the timing vary by state, so check with them, and it's worth ordering a few certified copies of the death certificate, as several organizations will ask for one)
- Contact the funeral director (check the Funeral chapter for wishes)
- Notify the deceased's employer (final pay, leave, retirement savings)
- Secure valuable items (jewelry, cash, documents) and record them

WITHIN THE FIRST 48 HOURS

- Notify close friends (see Key Contacts)
- Contact the lawyer
- Contact insurance companies (if death benefits apply)
- Arrange care for dependents
- Arrange care for pets
- Cancel immediate appointments
- Start a death administration notebook

NOTES: WHAT'S BEEN DONE, AND WHAT STILL NEEDS DOING

Executor Timeline

Being an executor is a marathon, not a sprint.

The work doesn't end after the first week. Settling an estate typically takes 6-12 months (sometimes longer if it's complicated).

This timeline breaks down what needs to happen at each stage: the first week, the first month, the first three months, and the first year.

Use this as a guide, not a strict schedule. Every estate is different. Some things will take longer than expected. Some will move faster. That's normal.

Your timeline: What to expect and when

Your Executor Timeline

What to do and when, from the first week through to the end of the first year.

THE FIRST WEEK

Secure the property and valuables

Register the death (usually handled by your funeral director; timeframes vary by state, and order multiple certificates)

Arrange the funeral

Locate the Will and this Estate Organizer

Contact the lawyer

Notify immediate family and close friends

Secure all financial documents

Start keeping detailed records

THE FIRST MONTH

Apply for probate if it's required (whether you need it, and how long it takes, varies by state, so check your state's probate court or ask the lawyer what applies)

Notify all relevant organizations (banks, retirement savings, Social Security, insurers)

Cancel or transfer services

Secure and value all assets

Identify all debts

Claim life insurance

Claim retirement plan (401(k)/IRA) death benefits

Keep paying urgent bills

THE FIRST THREE MONTHS

- Obtain Letters Testamentary (if applicable)
- Open an estate bank account
- Collect all assets
- Pay debts in the order that applies in your state (the priority of different debts varies, and paying them in the wrong order can create problems, so confirm the order with the lawyer first)
- File the final tax return
- Deal with property
- Manage business interests (if applicable)
- Cancel digital accounts (if instructed)
- Respond to creditors

THE FIRST SIX MONTHS

- Prepare estate accounts
- Obtain IRS clearance
- Prepare distribution schedule
- Communicate with beneficiaries
- Resolve any disputes

THE FIRST YEAR

Distribute the estate

Finalize estate accounts

Close the estate bank account

Retain records

If you're entitled to a fee for acting as executor, claim it properly. Whether you can be paid, and how much, depends on your state, the Will, and sometimes the beneficiaries or the court, so check with the lawyer first and keep it documented.

Common Executor Pitfalls & How to Avoid Them

Being an executor is harder than most people think.

There are legal requirements, financial complexities, and emotional landmines. It's easy to make mistakes, especially when you're grieving and under pressure from family.

This section covers the most common pitfalls executors face and how to avoid them.

Learn from other people's mistakes so you don't have to make them yourself.

Common mistakes and how to avoid them

PITFALL 1: Distributing assets too soon

THE MISTAKE: Executors sometimes distribute assets to beneficiaries before all debts are paid and all claims are settled. Then a creditor appears, or a tax bill arrives, and there's no money left to pay it.

HOW TO AVOID IT:

- Don't distribute anything until you have IRS clearance
- Wait until all debts are paid
- Wait until the required creditor-notice period for your state expires
- Keep a reserve in the estate account for unexpected expenses
- If there's any pressure to distribute early, talk to the lawyer first. Beneficiary agreement on its own may not protect you if a debt or tax bill turns up later, so get advice before releasing anything ahead of time.

PITFALL 2: Not keeping detailed records

THE MISTAKE: Executors fail to document their actions, expenses, and decisions. Later, beneficiaries question what happened, and the executor can't prove what they did or why.

HOW TO AVOID IT:

- Start a detailed record-keeping system from day one
- Document every phone call, letter, email, and meeting
- Keep all receipts for expenses (even small ones)
- Take photos of property before selling or distributing
- Keep copies of everything
- Use Section 41 (Executor Expense Log) to track costs

PITFALL 3: Paying debts in the wrong order

THE MISTAKE: Not all debts are equal. Some must be paid first (like funeral costs and tax debts). Executors who pay debts in the wrong order can be held personally liable.

HOW TO AVOID IT:

- Work with a lawyer to understand debt priority
- Some debts have to be paid before others, and getting the order wrong can leave you personally on the hook. The exact priority is set by your state's law, so don't work it out from a general list. Ask the lawyer to confirm the correct order for this estate before you pay anyone.
- Don't pay anyone until you know the full picture

PITFALL 4: Mixing personal and estate funds

THE MISTAKE: Executors use their own money to pay estate expenses, or they deposit estate money into their personal account. This creates confusion and can look like mismanagement.

HOW TO AVOID IT:

- Open a separate estate bank account immediately
- All estate income goes into this account
- All estate expenses are paid from this account
- Never mix it with your personal finances
- Keep the estate account separate until the estate is fully settled

PITFALL 5: Acting without probate when it's required

THE MISTAKE: Some executors try to access bank accounts, sell property, or distribute assets before getting Letters Testamentary. Banks and institutions won't cooperate, and it wastes time.

HOW TO AVOID IT:

- Check with the lawyer whether probate is needed
- If required, apply for it before trying to access assets
- Smaller estates sometimes qualify for a simpler process instead of full probate, but whether this estate does depends on your state's rules, so check with the lawyer.
- Wait for the Grant before taking action on major assets

PITFALL 6: Ignoring or delaying communication with beneficiaries

THE MISTAKE: Executors go silent. Beneficiaries don't know what's happening, assume the worst, and start making accusations or legal threats.

HOW TO AVOID IT:

- Send regular updates to beneficiaries (monthly or quarterly)
- Be transparent about timelines and delays
- Explain what you're doing and why
- Manage expectations (estates take time)
- Respond to questions promptly

PITFALL 7: Taking on too much alone

THE MISTAKE: Executors try to do everything themselves to save money. They get overwhelmed, make mistakes, and the estate takes years to settle.

HOW TO AVOID IT:

- Hire a lawyer. Yes, it costs money, but it's worth it.
- Use an accountant for tax matters
- Engage professionals for valuations (property, business, collectibles)
- Don't be a hero. This is too complex to do alone.

PITFALL 8: Selling assets too quickly (or too slowly)

THE MISTAKE: Executors panic-sell property at a loss because they feel pressured. Or they delay selling for years, racking up maintenance costs and frustrating beneficiaries.

HOW TO AVOID IT:

- Get professional valuations before selling anything
- Consult beneficiaries about major sales (if appropriate)
- Don't rush, but don't delay unnecessarily
- Consider market conditions (especially for property)
- Check the Will for specific instructions about selling

PITFALL 9: Not advertising for creditors

THE MISTAKE: Executors forget to advertise for creditors. A creditor appears after the estate is distributed, and the executor is personally liable.

HOW TO AVOID IT:

- Your lawyer will handle this
- Required by law in most states
- Advertise in newspapers and online
- required notice period for creditor claims (length varies by state)
- Don't distribute until the period expires

PITFALL 10: Paying themselves without documentation

THE MISTAKE: Executors take a fee without documenting it or getting beneficiary approval. Beneficiaries accuse them of theft.

HOW TO AVOID IT:

- Executors can usually be paid for their work, but how the fee is worked out depends on your state, the Will, and sometimes the court. Document your time, be transparent with the beneficiaries, and check with the lawyer what a reasonable fee looks like in your state before claiming anything.
- Document your time and effort
- Get written approval from beneficiaries before taking a fee
- Be transparent about what you're claiming
- Consult your lawyer about reasonable fees

PITFALL 11: Assuming the Will is clear when it's not

THE MISTAKE: The Will says "divide my estate equally among my children," but one child is estranged, or one was already given money during life. Executors guess what the deceased meant.

HOW TO AVOID IT:

- If the Will is unclear, get legal advice
- Don't interpret it yourself
- Courts can provide guidance on ambiguous Wills
- Check this organizer for additional context (especially Part 8)

PITFALL 12: Not dealing with digital assets

THE MISTAKE: Executors forget about online accounts, subscriptions, cryptocurrency, and digital photos. The estate keeps getting charged, or valuable assets are lost.

HOW TO AVOID IT:

- Check Sections 20-23 for digital asset details
- Cancel subscriptions to stop charges
- Access cryptocurrency with recovery phrases (don't lose them)
- Download photos and important files before closing accounts

PITFALL 13: Letting family pressure influence decisions

THE MISTAKE: A beneficiary pressures the executor to give them "their share" early, or to interpret the Will in their favor. The executor caves to keep the peace.

HOW TO AVOID IT:

- Your job is to follow the Will, not make everyone happy
- Don't be pushed into handing out anything early. If there's pressure to distribute ahead of time, check with the lawyer what's allowed in your state before you do.
- Don't let anyone bully you
- Refer difficult family members to the lawyer
- Document any pressure or threats

PITFALL 14: Not valuing assets properly

THE MISTAKE: Executors guess at asset values instead of getting professional valuations. This causes disputes and potential tax issues.

HOW TO AVOID IT:

- Get professional valuations for:
 - Property
 - Vehicles
 - Businesses
 - Collectibles
 - Jewelry
 - Art
- Keep valuation reports for your records
- Use valuations as of the date of death

PITFALL 15: Missing tax deadlines

THE MISTAKE: Executors don't realize the final tax return is due, or they miss the deadline. The IRS charges penalties and interest.

HOW TO AVOID IT:

- Work with the accountant (Section 19 has details)
- There's usually a final personal tax return to file after a death, and there can be deadlines that matter. The exact forms and due dates depend on the timing and the estate, so work with the accountant early so nothing is missed.
- Don't distribute the estate until you have IRS clearance
- Keep funds in reserve for potential tax bills

PITFALL 16: Not understanding retirement savings

THE MISTAKE: Executors assume retirement savings go to the estate automatically. It doesn't. Retirement savings are paid according to the beneficiary designation, not the Will.

HOW TO AVOID IT:

- Check Section 11 for retirement savings details
- Contact the retirement savings fund immediately
- Check for your named beneficiary designations
- Beneficiary designations should be reviewed regularly (check the date)
- Retirement savings can be paid to dependents or the estate

PITFALL 17: Underestimating how long it takes

THE MISTAKE: Executors tell beneficiaries "this will be done in a few months." A year later, it's still not settled, and everyone is angry.

HOW TO AVOID IT:

- Set realistic expectations from the start
- Set realistic expectations early. Let beneficiaries know that settling an estate often takes many months, sometimes longer, and that delays are normal, rather than promising a specific timeframe you can't control.
- Explain that delays are normal
- Update them regularly on progress
- Don't promise timelines you can't control

SUMMARY: THE GOLDEN RULES

1. Don't rush. Take your time and get it right.
2. Keep detailed records. Document everything.
3. Get professional help. Lawyers and accountants are worth it.
4. Communicate with beneficiaries. Transparency prevents conflict.
5. Follow the Will. Not family pressure.
6. Don't distribute until debts are paid and IRS clearance is received.
7. Open a separate estate bank account.
8. Get professional valuations.
9. Be patient with yourself. This is hard work.

You're doing your best. That's all anyone can ask.

NOTES: WHICH OF THESE APPLY TO THIS ESTATE, AND HOW YOU'LL HANDLE THEM

Executor Expense Log Template

As an executor, you'll spend money on behalf of the estate.

Lawyer fees. Accountant fees. Funeral costs. Property valuations. Travel expenses. Postage. Death certificates. Probate application fees.

All of these costs are paid from the estate, not from your own pocket. But you need to keep detailed records of every expense to prove what you spent and why.

This expense log helps you track everything.

Why keep detailed records?

Beneficiaries have the right to see how the estate's money was spent. If you can't prove an expense was legitimate, you might have to pay it back yourself.

Detailed records also protect you from accusations of mismanagement.

How to use this log:

Record every expense, no matter how small. Include the date, what it was for, who was paid, and the amount. Keep the receipt or invoice. At the end, you'll have a complete record of all estate expenses.

Let's track it all.

TOTALS AND NOTES

Notification Templates

After someone dies, you need to notify dozens of organizations.

Banks. Retirement plan administrators. Social Security. Insurance companies. Employers. Tax authorities. Utilities. Each one needs to be told formally, usually in writing.

This section provides letter templates you can adapt and use.

These templates are starting points. You'll need to customize them with specific details (names, account numbers, dates). But they give you the structure and wording to make notifications easier.

How to use these templates:

1. Choose the template that matches who you're notifying
2. Fill in the bracketed information with your details
3. Attach a certified copy of the death certificate
4. Keep a copy of every letter you send
5. Follow up if you don't hear back within 2 weeks

Let's make notifications easier.

The Unclaimed Money Checklist

When someone passes away, money often gets left behind in places nobody thinks to look. US state governments are holding billions of dollars in unclaimed property, and about 1 in 7 Americans has some waiting. Every check below is official and free. You never need to pay anyone to search.

☐ CHECK 1 · THE STATE UNCLAIMED PROPERTY OFFICES

unclaimed.org

The official directory from the National Association of Unclaimed Property Administrators. Pick each state the person ever lived or worked in, then search their name on that state's own site. Old bank accounts, deposits, refunds, uncashed checks and insurance payouts all end up here.

☐ CHECK 2 · THE MULTI-STATE SEARCH

missingmoney.com

The official national search run in partnership with state governments. One search covers many states at once. Still check each state individually as well, because not every state takes part.

☐ CHECK 3 · LOST LIFE INSURANCE POLICIES

naic.org (search for "Life Insurance Policy Locator")

A free service from the National Association of Insurance Commissioners. Submit one request and participating insurers check their records for policies in the person's name. Bring the death certificate details.

☐ CHECK 4 · OLD SAVINGS BONDS

treasurydirect.gov (search for "Treasury Hunt")

The US Treasury's official tool for finding matured savings bonds that were never cashed.

THREE THINGS THAT FIND MORE MONEY

- Search maiden names, previous names and common misspellings, not just the current name.
- Repeat the search in every state the person ever lived or worked in.
- The official searches are always free. Anyone charging a fee to "find" this money for you is selling something you can do yourself in minutes.
